2 hours, 0.5 course

Political Science 2212E: Extreme Leadership: Leaders, Crises and Controversies in Modern Politics

Short Title: Extreme Leadership

This course surveys the various ways leadership has been defined and treated theoretically and explores real world cases concerning how leaders exercise leadership, particularly in complex or challenging conditions. The course illustrates why and how some leaders are important, unpredictable and creative agents with much capacity to influence political outcomes.

Antirequisite(s): Political Science 2205E if taken in 2010-11, 2011-12, 2012-13 or 2013-14

2 hours, 1.0 course

Political Science 3204F/G: Great Debates in International Relations

The theoretical study of international relations has been shaped over the years by enduring works of political philosophers, historians, economists and practitioners of diplomatic craft. This course focuses on the "great debate(s)" at the heart of the modern discipline of IR, and how ideas influence our understanding of world politics.

Antirequisite(s): Political Science 3501F if taken in 2012-13 or 2013-14

2 hours, 0.5 course

Political Science 3205F/G: Africa in World Politics

Africa is growing in importance in International Relations. The place of Africa in world politics will be examined using the writings of prominent (mostly African) international relations theorists. As part of this, we will examine the ideas of 'Africa', the state, power, imperialism, legitimacy, institutions, and colonialism.

Antirequisite(s): Political Science 3390F if taken in 2012-13 or 2013-14

2 hours, 0.5 course

Political Science 4207F/G: Models of Democracy

Democracy is a central concept in politics. Different theoretical understandings of 'democracy' will be examined, and discussed with reference to current and practical political issues involving Canada and the United States. Related ideas include legitimacy, representation, capitalism, imperialism, liberalism, republicanism, and the state.

Antirequisite(s): Political Science 4413F/G if taken in 2012-13 or 2013-14

2 hours, 0.5 course

Political Science 4402F/G: Diplomacy and International Negotiations

The course explores contemporary international diplomacy. Topics include: foreign policy institutions, treaty-making processes, diplomatic protocol, logistics of negotiations and their influence on political outcomes, and the role of power, strategy and cultural differences. Students engage in realistic classroom simulations of multilateral negotiations, role-play diplomats and gain practical bargaining experience.
